Parham Road Bridge Closure Starts Monday

HENDERSON – The Parham Road bridge over Interstate 85 in Henderson will be closed for three weeks starting Monday, April 29. The closure is needed so a contractor can safely put a concrete latex overlay in place on the bridge's road surface, extending its life and making it a smoother ride for motorists.

Exit and on ramps for I-85 at the location will remain open.

A signed detour will be in place. Travelers going east on Parham Road will be sent onto I-85 South to the next exit (N.C. 39), where they should turn left at the end of the ramp and then left again onto I-85 North to get back to Parham Road. Westbound drivers have a similar detour, instead going north on I-85 to the next exit (Satterwhite Road), where they can turn around onto I-85 South to return to Parham Road on the other side of the bridge.

Drivers should use caution as they approach the closure from either side and should anticipate needing more time to travel through the area because of the detour.
